

Ms. Ensminger's News

Week of 12/4

Good Afternoon,

This Sunday is the first day of the Advent season. I hope you and your family find it brings a God centered time into your house. You are invited to join us on Sunday at St. Joe's HS for the X-STREAM games from 11:30-3:30. This will be a science filled day of fun. Events start and end all day so you are welcome any time. I'll be presenting Barbie Project Runway designs at a display table. If you are not busy, please join us for the fun! Miss Bryk would like me to remind any parents who are VIRTUS trained need to update their online training ASAP. We will have an awards assembly on Friday, celebrating the accomplishments of our year so far. Report cards will come home on Wednesday.

6th Grade Science: We are going to talk about the energy in the atmosphere and then look at how wind moves and affects the Earth. We will talk about how energy, including heat energy is transferred.

5th Grade Science: Our matter test is Wednesday, and students should be studying this weekend. After reviewing and testing, we will start a new topic -force and motion. We will be talking about what force is, and doing an experiment to see how force affects motion.

5th Grade Religion: Wow! We had an exciting week learning the Christmas story. Monday we will talk about the wise men and King Herod. We will be creating a 3-D tri-o-rama depicting part of the Christmas story. I can't wait to see these amazing depictions.

Happy Weekend,

Ms. JoAnn Ensminger
